The Column Everybody Reads—Chat About Your Friends and Neighbors—Here and There.

Don't forget to write it . . 1919 . .
W. B. Souser, of Napier, called at our office on Monday.

Frank Cavendar, of Mann, was a business visitor to Bedford yesterday.

Adam Claycomb, of Cessna, Rt. 1, called at our office on last Saturday.
Fred Diehl, of Mann's Choice, Rt. 1, was in Bedford last week on business.

James Rhodes, of Saxton, was transacting business in Bedford on Tuesday.

Cumberland Valley's assessor, W. A. Hite, attended the appeal on Monday.

Oscar L. Beegle, of Osterburg, called at our office on Monday while in Bedford.

D. C. Nave, of Cumberland Valley, was a caller at the Gazette office on Monday.

Chas. Easter, of Bedford, Rt. 5, was a pleasant caller at our office on Saturday last.

Herman G. Miller, of Fishertown, was transacting legal business in Bedford on Monday.

M. H. Kramer, Esq., of Hyndman, was transacting business in Bedford on Tuesday.

John C. Lilly, Cumberland Valley's progressive farmer, was in Bedford last Saturday.

Prof. H. H. Brumbaugh, of Broad Top, was in Bedford Wednesday on professional business.

F. J. Smith, Bedford township's auctioneer, was in Bedford on last Saturday and paid us a visit.

Elmer Ross, of Cumberland Valley, was in our office on Monday and paid his subscription in advance.

Emory Howsare, assessor of Southampton township, called at the Gazette office while attending appeals on Tuesday.

C. R. Beegle, Bedford, 5, was a caller at our office last week. Mr. Beegle reads the Gazette and Record.

An infant of Hiram Shipley's was buried at Fairview, Mann township last Saturday. It died Thursday of influenza.

James A. Mickle, of West St. Clair, called at the Gazette office on Tuesday, the last day of 1918, and advanced his subscription.

William and John Rice, of Clearville, Rt. 2, were in Bedford on last Friday. John just returned from camp and looks fine.

Mrs. Gussie Andrews and son, John, have returned to Altoona, after spending the holidays in Bedford county visiting friends and relatives.

E. F. Davis, of East Providence, was transacting business in Bedford last Saturday. Mr. Davis is one of East Providence's progressive farmers.

Miss Leone Sell will leave today for North Carolina, where she will attend school the rest of the year. She will stop over at Washington with friends en route.

On Tuesday George Points, Attorney for the Jennie B. Cartwright estate sold her late residence on South Richard street to Scott U. Hammer.

J. R. Anderson, of Cessna, called at the Gazette office yesterday and advanced his subscription. The Gazette has been going to the Anderson family for years.

We have just received a letter from Coleharbor, North Dakota, enclosing photographs of Elmer Ash, his father of Mann township, and Owen Snyder, of Monroe. Elmer is feeding his 100 porkers in the one. In the other Owen and Elmer are exhibiting a sled load of rabbits, foxes, and deer.

Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Beegle, of Rainsburg, were in Bedford on Tuesday. They expect to have a big sale in the near future and move to Westminster, Maryland, near Baltimore. They have bought a dairy farm there and expect to go into that business entirely.

Frank Fluke, of Somerset, was transacting business at Bedford on last Saturday. Mr. Fluke is a draftsman and owns and operates coal mines, several of them, in Somerset county. He hailed from old Bedford county and was the son of the late John B. Fluke, of Loysburg. In 1880 he was elected county surveyor and in 1883 he resigned to accept a position in the land office at Harrisburg. He operated on Broad Top and knows Bedford county from A to Z because of his surveying activities for himself and father in 1894 he located in Somerset.

Out in the Park of a Sunday afternoon, when everybody is dressed up, it's growing increasingly hard to tell one class from another.

BUSINESS METHODS PROFITABLE TO FARMERS

Purchasers Often Found Through Friends—Newspaper Advertising, Circulars and Bulletin Boards Helpful—How Producers Can Develop Trade.

For producers who wish to market by parcel post the most satisfactory way of finding customers is to write to friends, relatives, or acquaintances in cities, seeking their trade. Purchasers, on the other hand, often can locate reliable producers by correspondence with friends, relatives, or acquaintances in the country. More than 75 per cent of the produce being marketed by parcel post in a number of cities in which investigations have been made is sent by persons who obtained their customers through friends, relatives, or acquaintances, according to specialists of the Bureau of Markets, U. S. Department of Agriculture.

This method of establishing business relationship is especially recommended for the general farmer who has a limited amount of produce. Those who wish to market a great deal of produce by parcel post may find it necessary to obtain customers by personally soliciting strangers or through advertising in newspapers and by other means.

Information received from persons who have advertised farm produce for sale indicates that usually advertising is not profitable for the general farmer, but often gives satisfactory results to the producer who specializes in some product that can be shipped throughout the year. Advertisements should be short and should give a description of the goods, with the prices, and the name and address of the person advertising. In some cities the Sunday edition of a newspaper gives better results than the daily edition. The person who advertises must offer a product that is wanted by the persons who read the paper at the time the product is advertised, in the place where the paper has a circulation. In other words, he must know what to advertise, when to advertise, and where to advertise.

Must Use Circulars Carefully.

Form letters, circulars, or cards sent to a selected list of persons have been suggested often as means of obtaining customers for produce by parcel post. The cost of obtaining customers by circularizing is often great, and unless the names of persons to whom the circulars are sent are selected very carefully this method of obtaining customers can not be especially recommended.

Customers may be obtained by making a personal canvass in a selected neighborhood in a city. The neighborhood should be one which is not supplied with a great many markets or green grocery stores in order that the competition may not be as keen as it would be in a neighborhood that has excellent marketing facilities. A suburban district of homes with good incomes offers a good field in which to solicit trade. In many such districts the delivery service of the groceries is not as satisfactory as in the city.

If the producer's farm is on or near a much-traveled road an attractive farm bulletin board placed conspicuously near the road is a help to both producer and consumer in making business contact. Many city dwellers now travel far out into the country by automobile, and this fact can be turned to account in securing customers by using a bulletin board. This method will be especially useful on clean, well-kept farms. The statements on the board should give the articles for sale, together with their prices, delivered to the purchaser's door by parcel post, and the main items should be in lettering large enough to be read quickly.

Warning notices might be placed at a proper distance in each direction from the main bulletin board. The wording on these warning boards should be brief but pointed, such, for example, as "Fair View Farm. Read Marketing Bulletin Ahead."

Stationery a Help.

If a farmer expects to develop a business of selling produce to strangers he will find it advisable to have printed stationery bearing the name of the farm, with envelopes to match. If the farm is not named an appropriate name should be selected. A simple, though attractive and business-like letterhead can be printed without much cost. It should give the name and location of the farm, the farmer's name, and a simple statement of the business. Elaborate and highly colored letterheads embellished with illustrations of buildings, fruits, or animals should be avoided.

Blank statement forms or invoices should be filled in and inclosed with shipments of produce by mail wish to know the price of the shipment, and by the use of printed statement forms the shipper can furnish this information without much trouble.

Labeling Parcels.

Each parcel must bear the name and address of the shipper, the name and address of the person for whom intended, and the nature of the contents, such as "Fragile" or "Perishable." As tags frequently are torn off, it is best to have this information written or stamped directly on the outer wrapper or container. If the only mark of identity of producer and consumer is on a tag and the tag is lost, the parcel can neither be delivered nor returned to the sender.

Producers who have business enough to justify them may secure gummed labels worded somewhat as follows:

From Fair View Farm,
John Brown, Proprietor,
Blank, Virginia.
PERISHABLE,
EGGS.

The wording may be changed to suit the product shipped, changing "Eggs" to "Poultry," "Butter," or "Vegetables," and "Perishable" to "Fragile," as the case may require.

These labels, if properly applied, should not come off. They will serve as an advertisement and may result in inquiries from other customers.

Business Relations With Customers.
Once contact has been made and shipping begun it is important that proper business relations be established and maintained, for on these depend success. The difficulty frequently met in obtaining the first order makes it important for the producer to use businesslike methods to retain the trade that he secures.

Whether a person is successful in parcel-post marketing depends largely on his adaptability to this work. If routine and detailed work is distasteful to him he may never learn how to keep up a business relationship. Thousands of persons who have been successful in obtaining customers have been unsuccessful in keeping them. Much has been learned from the experience of both successful and unsuccessful shippers.

The most important feature in a business relationship is a square deal. Good grading of produce, strict business honesty, prompt attention to correspondence and orders, and satisfactory adjustment of complaints are needed. The consumer as well as the producer should do his part in these matters.

How Direct Dealing Succeeds.

Housewives appreciate receiving farm produce which they know to be fresh. Many farmers within 150 miles of cities have regular supplies of high-grade produce, the quality of which they can guarantee. The parcel post offers a means of direct dealing between producer and consumer, with profit to both.

Parcel-post shipments are increasing in number, though probably they always will affect only a small percentage of the farm produce that goes to market. Dealing by parcel post succeeds if the farmer is careful to keep up the quality of his produce, packs it safely and attractively, and meets his engagements promptly—always supposing that the consumer also observes business methods in the transaction.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture's Farmers' Bulletin 922, "Parcel Post Business Methods," gives detailed suggestions regarding means of obtaining customers and methods of carrying on business, with samples of suitable letterheads, bills, order blanks and other business forms.

GEORGE W. B. FLETCHER, LEWIS, IOWA.

George W. B. Fletcher, of Lewis, Iowa, died last Friday at his home in Lewis, Iowa, from stomach trouble. He was born in Monroe township January 20, 1846, and attended school in the Fletcher district and was a very apt student. Some forty years ago he "went West" and bought the Lewis Standard, a weekly newspaper, and has been running this ever since. He came home several years ago and married Julia Miller, daughter of the late Daniel Miller, who survives him. Silas Fletcher, Lyman C. of Washington, D. C.; James, of Clearfield; Louise Means, of Chaneyville, Rt. 1; Wilson W. and Mrs. Francis Sipes, of Ft. Smith, Arkansas; Pauline, wife of George Weimer, Marcus, Iowa, and Mrs. Eugene Hartley, of Piney Grove, Maryland, survive and Clymer, of Chapman, deceased.

He was buried at Lewis, Iowa, funeral being preached by Rev. B. F. Myers, of the Congregational church.

JANE MILLER MANN

Last Saturday, at Inglesmith, Mann township, Jane Miller died of heart trouble. She was born December 19, 1846, and was never married. Her two brothers, John H. Miller, of Piney Grove, Md., and Bartley Miller, of Clearville, and two sisters, Mrs. Mary Clingerman, of Inglesmith, and Mrs. Margaret Maye, of Cumberland, still survive. The funeral was held at Fairview church on Sunday last at 3 o'clock, conducted by Rev. A. R. Garland.

ANDREW ELLIS BENNETT MANN

On Christmas Day, Andrew Ellis Bennett, son of Mr. and Mrs. Silas Bennett, of near Artemas, died of spinal meningitis. He was 27 years, 10 months and 14 days old. He is survived by his parents, three sisters and three brothers. The funeral was held at Fairview last Sunday at 10 o'clock and conducted by Revs. Holtsoppe and Hershberger, of Everett. He was a member of the Brethren church at Artemas and was a good Christian young man.

Dennis Whitestone, son of Mr. and Mrs. Simon Whitestone, and Mabel F. Diehl, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Diehl, of Friend's Cove, were married at the Cove Reformed parsonage on Christmas Eve, by Rev. Walter C. Pugh.

It is not the quantity of food we eat that nourishes us, but rather what we assimilate.

CHARLES NEGLER, JR. COMMITS SUICIDE Slashes Throat With Razor

About three o'clock yesterday morning Charles Negler, Jr. took his own life by cutting his throat from ear to ear with a razor. No reason for the act can be assigned. He was in good health and was following his usual trade as barber in his father's shop. When found he was still alive but died shortly after Dr. Walter Enfield arrived.

Mr. Negler was a nice young man and was liked by everybody. His sudden act was a shock to the community. He was a member of the Reformed church.

Letter to Mrs. T. J. Growden, of Cumberland Valley, From Her Son
A. E. F., Nov. 24, 1918.

Dear Mother:
It has been about two weeks since I last wrote to you and as yet haven't had a scratch from anyone except a boy friend who is in the hospital.

This morning I got a notice that there is a registered package in the military postoffice for me in Langies, so I think I shall go down this afternoon and see what it is. I think possibly it is my money. The company clerk promised to send it to me. I have almost four months' pay coming to me now. The censorship has been lifted by the newspaper reports, but they haven't received the official notice here at school yet, but we are looking for it today or tomorrow, so I will go ahead and write and hold my mail until the order comes in.

We are at Fort France, within five miles of Langies. I was down last night to get an anti-coolie bath and get my clothes and blankets fumigated. I sure hope I will get rid of them, for I sure think they are some pests. I have had them for the last three or four months.

I am wearing a service stripe; have been entitled to it for quite a while, but never took time to sew them on.

One fellow here is just pulling off some rich stuff. He said he went out one day to get a pair of shoes and killed eight Huns and didn't get his size, so he came back without any. We have come over we landed in Liverpool, Eng.; went from there to Folkestone, and from there to Dover. We spent one night in Folkestone and one in Dover. We crossed the Strait of Dover to Calais, France, and there is where the hiking and riding in box cars began. We were in reserve for the English for a while, but didn't get into any scrap there. We went from there to Chateau Thierry, where the scrap began. Our next time on the front was at Fismes and the last time I was with the outfit we were in the big drive in the Argonne Forest, for fourteen days. I sure was some tired when we got out of there. I came right here to school before I got rested up but am feeling good now. Our division was in the last scrap and have been hearing all kinds of reports as to where they are now. I heard last night that they were within 30 miles of here and I know that I will go over on Thanksgiving if that is true, for I sure am anxious to see how they made out the last time.

I would like to get some souvenirs of France if it wasn't for carrying them around. I do not know what they are going to do with us now, as an order has come through not to commission any more officers, and believe me I don't care since the war is over. The only thing I hope is that I can get back to my company. It has been pretty cold here, but hasn't rained since the armistice was signed. Will close for this time. Your loving son,
JIM.

LARGEST MOTOR VESSEL IN WORLD

The British twin-screw Diesel engine vessel Glenapp, which has just been built by a Glasgow shipyard, is, according to the local press, the largest and most powerful motor vessel in the world. It is of 10,000 tons deadweight, and has two sets of engines, constructed by Messrs. Harland & Wolff at their Glasgow works. These give a total horse-power of 6,600, which figures represent a very marked progress in this type of vessel.

Friend's Cove Reformed Church, Rev. W. C. Pugh, Pastor.

Sunday, Jan. 5, there will be Sunday school at Zion (Rainsburg) Cove and Trinity churches at 9:30 a. m. Divine worship at the Cove church at 10:30 a. m. Those persons who have not, as yet, sent their Xmas offering for the orphans of Hoffman Orphanage, please bring along or send to this service Sunday. Everyone cordially invited.

Wolfsburg Charge of the M. E. Church, Rev. Alfred B. Harper, Minister.

Sunday Jan. 5th.
Divine worship—Rainsburg, 10:30 a. m. Sermon theme, "The King's Highway."

Trans Run, 2 p. m.—Sermon theme, "A New Year's Message."
Wolfsburg, 7:30 p. m.—Sermon theme, "New Beginnings."

A warm and comfortable church will be assured you at the evening service. The church has even had the flu. Come and be with us at these services and start the New Year with Thanking you, cordially yours,
A. B. HARPER

ARMOR THAT RESISTS MACHINE GUN BULLETS

Recent accounts have told of tests made of a type of body armor invented by Dr. G. O. Brewster, of Dover, N. J.

Dr. Brewster donned his armor and proceeded to let army officers fire a machine gun at him at close range. The proof that the bullets were properly shed lies in the fact that the doctor is alive and unwounded, although the little leaden pellets went straight for the middle of his chest.

The only apparent fault of the armor is that it weighs close on to sixty pounds. It was V-shaped, covering the front of the head and body. Pneumatic cushions at points eliminated much of the shock from the impact of the bullets, and the doctor in the tests, though staggered, was able to keep his balance.

TELEPHONE FOR WEST INDIAN REPUBLICS

(Consul Arthur McLean, Puerto Rico, Dominican Republic.)
The telephone systems of Hayti and the Dominican Republic have recently been connected. It is now possible to communicate between the principal towns of the two republics.

Telephone messages are written out in this country the same as telegrams in the United States. They are then transmitted by the telephone operator.

SOCIAL

A very pretty but quiet wedding took place Dec. 25, 1918, at the home of Mrs. Annie Gephart, of New Paris. Her only daughter, Dena Elizabeth, was united in marriage to Mr. Warren Machtey.

Promptly at noon the bridal couple entered the parlor and took their places beside the large Christmas tree, decorated for the occasion. As the clock struck twelve the marriage ceremony was performed by Rev. A. F. Richards, the impressive ring ceremony being used.

After the usual congratulations a beautiful dinner was served to the immediate families of the bride and groom and a few friends that were present.

The bride is one of the most highly respected young ladies of the community while the groom is a prosperous young farmer near Ryt.

Mr. and Mrs. Machtey will make their future home on the Gephart farm.

We wish them many happy and prosperous years of wedded life.

Ray Bowser, of Osterburg, and Jennie Zelda Snyder, also of Osterburg, were united in marriage Dec. 24, 1918, by A. F. Richards, at the Evangelical parsonage, New Paris.

We join in wishing them success through the journey of life.

VEGETABLE DIET FOR WORKERS IN COLD WEATHER

Meat is supposed to be particularly needful in two cases—in cold weather and for people who do hard, muscular labor. However, we extract from "Eating for Health and Efficiency," by Dr. Alasker, a vegetarian cold weather menu for laborers.

But, first of all, here are a few aphorisms from Dr. Alasker on the subject of a vegetable diet.

Vegetables are not more easily digested than meats. They are more difficult. This, however, is nothing against a vegetable diet.

Where the meat eaters suffer from protein poisoning the vegetarian suffers from starch and sugar poisoning, and my experience has taught me that one is about as bad as another.

If a person has a baked potato he needs no other starch in that meal. Make it a general rule to eat but one kind of concentrated starch at a meal.

Be you vegetarian or meat eater, cook simply and avoid greasy messes. There are no health foods. All foods are health foods if properly prepared and eaten.

Nuts and peanuts will take the place of eggs, milk and cheese.

Peanut oil, or other nut oil, olive oil and cottonseed oil will take the place of butter and cream.

Nearly all nuts are rich in protein and oil.

The chestnut is very starchy and can be substituted for bread and potatoes or rice, or any other starch.

Here is a menu for hard workers that is both hearty and nourishing and inexpensive:

Breakfast—Corn bread with cow or peanut butter. Raisins or dates.

Lunch—Vegetable soup. Boiled or baked potatoes with peanut butter. Cooked carrots or turnips.

Dinner—Baked beans or lentils. Large slice of rutabagas (a sort of a turnip) and a dish of string beans. Cabbage slaw.

"HOLE IN HAND"

TRICK TESTS EYES

In parlor physics an illusion is sometimes demonstrated as follows: A sheet of newspaper is rolled up to make a tube three feet long which is held in the right hand in front of the right eye which is focused through the tube upon some distant object. The left eye is directed upon the palm of the left hand, which is held against the tube and near its peripheral end. The two eye pictures are fused in the brain so that the right eye appears to see its objective through a hole in the left hand. This trick is of value in testing the eyes. If the hole is seen in the middle of the hand binocular vision is perfect. If seen on the right side there is exaggerated convergence; if on the left side divergence.

PRESIDENT FAVORS PUSHING CONSTRUCTION OF HIGHWAYS

Secretary of War Also Advocates Early Resumption of Road Work.

Send Letters Indorsing Views of Secretary of Agriculture on Activities Under Federal Aid Act—Added Appropriation Desirable.

President Wilson favors the earliest possible resumption and extension of highway construction under the Federal aid road act, and has written Secretary of Agriculture Houston to that effect. The Secretary of War also has written the Secretary of Agriculture in favor of highway work.

Views of President.

The President's letter follows:

"Dear Mr. Secretary: I heartily agree with you that it would be in the public interest to resume in full measure the highway construction operations under the Federal aid road act, and to do so as speedily as possible. I understand the necessity which existed for their contraction during the stress through which we have been passing, but that obstacle is now removed. I believe that it would be highly desirable to have an additional appropriation made available to the Department of Agriculture, to be used in conjunction, if possible, with any surplus State and community funds, in order that these operations may be extended. It is important not only to develop good highways throughout the country as quickly as possible, but it is also at this time especially advisable to resume and extend all such essential public works, with a view to furnishing employment for laborers who may be seeking new tasks during the period of readjustment. Knowing that the Department of Agriculture and the State highway authorities in each State have been carefully working out road systems and developing plans and specifications I have no doubt that all activities in this field can be vigorously conducted through these two sets of existing agencies, acting in full accord.

"Faithfully, yours,
"WOODROW WILSON."

ROADS TO FURNISH EMPLOYMENT.

In the transition from war to peace there doubtless will be a period in which some laborers engaged in war industries and men released from the Army will be seeking new tasks and, so far as governmental intervention is concerned, the tasks on which they may be employed, should be of the highest public utility.

Public works would furnish suitable employment for many unemployed men and among such enterprises there are few kinds whose construction is better worth expanding and pressing than public roads.—Secretary Houston.

THE EMERGENCY THROUGH WHICH THE NATION HAS PASSED ONLY SERVED TO EMPHASIZE THE SUPREMACY OF IMPORTANCE OF THE CO-OPERATIVE AGRICULTURAL EXTENSION SERVICE. IT HAS BECOME INCREASINGLY CLEAR THAT NO MORE IMPORTANT PIECE OF EDUCATIONAL EXTENSION MACHINERY HAS EVER BEEN CREATED.—SECRETARY HOUSTON.

The emergency through which the Nation has passed only served to emphasize the supreme importance of the Co-operative Agricultural Extension Service. It has become increasingly clear that no more important piece of educational extension machinery has ever been created.—Secretary Houston.

GREAT ANTIQUITY OF MARINERS' COMPASS

Ancient Chinese records would seem to give the use of the magnetic needle for determining direction a long and varied history. The principle of the compass, or as the Chinese call it, the south-pointing chariot, is stated by Chinese and foreign authorities alike to have been discovered during the reign of Chong Wang, 1115-1079 B. C. The discovery was forgotten in a few hundred years. Then the philosopher Chang Hong, who died in 139 B. C., reconstructed the device. In succeeding years his model was lost and forgotten. From the third century A. D. onward great interest was shown by the Chinese sages in the allusions in old writings to the mysterious south-pointing chariot. Attempt after attempt was made to solve the riddle, and then we read in writings of the eleventh century of the compass being in use by mariners.

The Chinese south-pointing chariot was a magnetized needle suspended on a thread, so as to give freedom to its north and south propensities. It seems not to have been used by the Chinese for navigation, but solely as an instrument for geographers. It is probable that the Chinese junk captains of early days found it a needless luxury in their shore hugging and river navigation.

THE INNOCENCE OF PRIMEVAL MAN

Here is a droll passage from "The Origin of Civilization and the Primitive Condition of Men" by Sir John Lubbock:

"The whole mental condition of a savage is so different from ours that it is often very difficult to follow what is passing in his mind, or to understand the motives by which he is influenced. Many things appear natural and almost self-evident to him which produce a very different impression on us. 'What?' said a negro to Burton. 'Am I to starve while my sister has children whom she can sell?' When the natives of the Lower Murray first saw pack oxen some of them were frightened and took them for demons with spears on their heads," while others thought they were the wives of the settlers, because they carried the baggage."

The THIRTEENTH COMMANDMENT.

CHAPTER I.

As usual nowadays, instead of knocking at the door Fate called up on the telephone.

Though the bell shrilled almost in Mrs. Kip's ear she would not answer it. She winced, shook her head, agitated her rocking chair with petulance, embroidered vindictively, and hardly so much called out as sighed very loudly toward the hallway:

"Daphne! O-oh, Daphne! the telephone again!"

On the stairs there sounded a muffled scurry like the rush of an April shower chased down a hillside by the sun. An allegory of April darted across the room and raised the telephone to her lips as if it were a beaker of good cheer.

Her mother was used to this humor of Daphne's and paid no heed till a sudden frost chilled the warm tone of the girl's voice. The smile of hospitality wasted on the telephone had given place to a look of embarrassment.

Mrs. Kip whispered anxiously, "Who is it?"

Daphne motioned her not to interrupt, and her voice grew deep and important. It became what her brother Bayard called her "reception voice."

In her grandest contralto she said:

"This is Miss Kip. Yes, I have. Yes, he does. I beg pardon? Oh!—Oh! Oh! How do you do, Mr. Wimburn?"

"Mr. Who?" her mother keened.

Daphne whispered to quiet her, "A young man from New York—friend of Bayard's—same office. I haven't got his name yet."

Into the telephone she was saying, and bowing and nodding the while with her politest face, "Indeed I'll try to be. Of course Cleveland's not New York, but— By the way, do you dance? That's good. That's right; might as well be deaf if you don't! How long will you be in Cleveland? Oh, is that all? Well, then, you must come out here and have tea with us this very afternoon. I'll call for you at the hotel in my little car. No; it's not one of those; it's an electric. I run it myself. Afraid to risk it? Brave man! I'll be there in fifteen minutes, and you might be on the steps. Goodby, Mr. Wimburn."

This last was said in the fond tone of ancient friendship, and she hung up the receiver with a gesture like shaking hands.

She turned to find her mother thinking her lips in a long, tight line; her cheeks bulged explosively. Daphne forestalled her:

"He's a young fellow in the same firm as Bayard. Says he's here on business for ten days. Bayard told him to call me up and tell me to be nice to him. That sounds like Bay. Also said he hadn't time to write. That sounds like still. Bayard told him to kiss you for him, so he must be all right. I was going to take him to the hotel to a tea-dance, but I thought I'd better give him a look-over first. So I'll roll him out here. Get out the nice china and the napkins I monogrammed, and—"

"But, Daphne! Wait! I can't—"

"I haven't time to argue with you, mamma. Please do as I tell you for once, and don't fuss. Mr. Wimburn will probably have a lot of news to tell you about your prodigal son. G'bye!"

She popped a kiss on the forehead that anxiety had turned to corduroy and ran upstairs like another April shower chasing the sun uphill. She flashed down again with hat and gloves, and, with nose repowdered, slammed the front door gayly, flung med the steps, and strode across the long lawn to the little electric car standing under the porte cochere. The car was very large for a beetle but pretty small for an automobile.

CHAPTER II.

The night train from New York had deposited Clay Wimburn in the grimy cavern of the station at an early hour. He had dawdled over his breakfast, feeling lost without his New York morning papers.

When at last it grew late enough to telephone for an appointment with the man he had come to see he was disgusted to learn that the wretch would not be visible till the next day.

It was then that Bayard Kip's parting behest to call up his sister returned to Wimburn. He planned to compose a formal note of self-introduction, but Bayard had forgotten to tell him his sister's name or his father's initials. There were several Kips in the telephone book, and he could not tell which would be which. He decided to call up each number and ask a maid or somebody if Mr. Bayard Kip's people lived there.

The very first number he called brought Daphne herself suddenly voice to voice with him. Voices are characters, and it was a case of love at first hearing with him. She had him smiling and cooling at the second phrase. He felt that she was going to make his stay in Cleveland pleasant.

He formed all sorts of pictures of her while he waited on the hotel steps, but when she stepped out of her car and looked about she was none of the Misses Kip he had planned. She was a round, pretty little thing, amiable of eye and humorous about the lips, and cunningly dressed. She looked as if she would be a plucky, tireless sportswoman; yet she had a wistful, tender hugableness that a girl ought not to lose, however well she plays tennis.

"Is this Mr.—" she began. He was too nervous to notice her pause.

He retorted, "Is this Miss Kip?"

He noted that she shook hands well, with a boyish clench accompanied by an odd little duck of the head.

"Mighty nice of you to take me off this desert island," he beamed.

"Mighty glad to have the privilege," she said as she verified the fraternity pin on his overcoat. "Mother is dying to hear how Bayard is."

Mothers have little power left as guardians, but the children find that the title has a certain value at times in keeping order.

"Won't you get in?" said Daphne, pointing to her car. She made him crowd in first, then followed and closed the door and pulled the throttle.

He meditated aloud: "How wonderful it really is that you should talk to me over the telephone and invite me to your home and come and get me like this."

"What's so wonderful about that?" said Daphne. "Everybody does it."

"Everything that everybody does is wonderful," said Wimburn. "But how especially wonderful it is to live in a city where there are no walls about the gardens. Look! there aren't even fences. The lawns are all joined together and the houses are mostly windows. Everything is so open and free, full of sunlight and frankness. You're taking me home in this charming little glass showcase to introduce me to your mother. I tell you the world do move! A woman of today has a lot to be thankful for. You ought to be mighty happy."

"Ought-to-be hasn't much to do with it," Daphne sighed. "We've got a lot to get yet—and a lot to get rid of."

He sank back discouraged. The sex was still insatiable.

After a short ride they turned into a driveway leading through a spacious expanse of grass dotted with trees and shrubs, to a homelike house without beauty or ugliness—a house that had grown with the personalities of the occupants. The only ostentations about the place were the cupola of an earlier day and the porte cochere stuck out like a broken wing.

She led him into the house and waved him toward the hall tree. When he had set down his hat and stick she led him into the drawing room.

"Mother, we're home."

"Yes, dear," said Mrs. Kip, who called Daphne "dear" before company.

"Mother," said Daphne, "I want to present Mr.—" (mumble—gulp). She had not yet achieved his name.

Her mother shocked her by saying, "Delighted to meet you, Mr.—" I didn't quite catch the name."

Daphne blushed for her mother's query, but was glad to overhear the stranger's answer:

"I am Mr. Wimburn, Mrs. Kip—Clay Wimburn."

At this moment a tall, shambling man walked in. He looked as if he looked older than he was. His spectacles overwhelmed a rather unsuccessful nose. Daphne hardly needed to introduce him as her father. She gave Wimburn a name now, and he felt called upon to explain his incursion.

"I know your son Bayard very well. I'm in his office. We belong to the same fraternity—different chapters of course. We struck up a great friendship. When he knew I was coming to Cleveland he said, 'Tell my sister to be nice to you,' and—"

Wimburn paused in some embarrassment before the ballroom manner of Mrs. Kip, but the pompous disguises of timidity fell from her as she murmured—and blushed in a motherly way:

"Daphne told me. He said for you to kiss his mother for him."

"Yes—"

"Well, I am his mother."

"Oh! May I?"

"Will you?"

He pressed his lips respectfully on her cheek, but she, closing her eyes to imagine him her son, flung her fat arms about him and held him a moment. He kissed her again with a kind of vicarious devotion.

"I'd want Bayard to deliver such a message to your mother," she explained.

Already Wimburn was a member of the household; he had been kissed and sympathized with.

He turned to Daphne with an apologetic look and saw that she was staring at him with softer eyes than he had thought she had.

Definite anxieties engaged Mrs. Kip, for tea had come in tottering on a tray carried by a panic-stricken cook, as agile as a hippopotamus and as shy as a violet.

Daphne and her mother and father went through the tea ceremony with the anxiety of people in an earthquake, and the "Swedish dromedary" stared at the unaccustomed sight as if the tea bibbers were drinking poison and she watching for the convulsions to begin.

Clay Wimburn talked altogether about Bayard and his wonderful progress in business in spite of the hard times. Bayard, he said, was sticking to his desk like a demon, and he let nothing distract him.

"It must be glorious living in New York," Daphne sighed.

"Why don't you come and pay Bayard a visit?" Wimburn suggested.

"He wouldn't have time to take me anywhere, and I don't know anybody else there."

"You know me. And I'd be only too glad to try to repay your hospitality to me."

Mrs. Kip looked on and listened with the fond alarm of one who has seen fatal courtships begun with such fencing.

When at length Daphne suggested that there was still time to rush down to the Hotel Statler for a dance or two Mrs. Kip smiled at her. Wimburn did not know that he had been brought home on approval. Mrs. Kip realized that he was not to be reticent as impossible. Her fancy gamboled in futures.

Wimburn was the victim of an onset of that delirium amans known as love at first sight. He was at the right age, and he found something exotically captivating in this strange girl in the strange city. He was poisoned with love, and his opinion of Daphne was lunatically fantastic. No one in the world equaled her. No one ever had equaled her or could equal her in any future ever.

Spring and love are the perennial miracles, always new, always. It was springtime in Wimburn and in the calendar of the countless other youth of mankind, kind, bird and fish kind, flowers and fruit trees, and perhaps of chemicals in the ground were feeling the same mania.

Daphne's cordiality was at first merely the hospitable warmth of her unusually cordial community. But she caught the fever from Wimburn and decided that he was the final word in human evolution.

They began to dread the society of others, to resent the existence of a squatter population on their private planet. The world was too much with them. The little car was transparent. Even at night etiquette required them to light it up within.

Wimburn did not return to New York so soon as he expected. It seemed impossible to uproot himself from that pleasant soil. One afternoon when he had already overstayed his furlough Daphne and he were riding in the little car through the outer suburb known as Shaker Heights—a section rapidly evolving from a sleepy religious community to a swarm of city residences.

The late afternoon moon had risen in a sky still rosy with the afterglow of sunset. The air was murmurous with pleading.

Suddenly Wimburn cried aloud, to his own surprise and hers, "Daphne! Miss Kip! I can't stand everything, you know! I'm only human, after all."

"What's the matter?" she asked in prosaic phrase but with a poetic flutter of breath.

"I love you, d—n it!—pardon me, but I'm infernally in love with you. I'm tormented. I came here on business, and instead of my finishing it you've finished me. I'm two days overdue in New York and I've had to lie to the office to explain why. And all I can think of now is that I'd rather resign and starve to death than go back and leave you here."

"Honestly?" she barely breathed.

"Desperately!" he moaned. "What's to become of me?"

"You'd better go back, I suppose. You'll soon get over it and find somebody else to love."

"There's nobody else in the world worth loving. I'd die if I gave you up! I'd simply die."

He went on with aching anxiety: "Could you care for me just a little? If you could love me or just promise to try to, I could face my exile for a while. Do you think you could love me ever?"

She dropped her chin on her breast and sighed.

"I guess I do now."

The miraculous felicity of this situation overwhelmed them both. He clapt her in his arms and she flung hers about him, forgetting entirely the steering wheel. The neglected little car promptly scuttled off the road, crossed a gutter into a vacant lot, scooped up a "For Sale" sign, and was about to tip over into an excavation when Daphne looked up long enough to shut off the power. Then in a blind rapture she returned to where she belonged—his embrace.

Soon she was assailed with fears for the credibility of this wonder work, and when he said:

"When shall we announce our engagement?" she protested:

"Oh, not till we are sure."

"I'm sure now."

"But we must be terribly sure. It's such a dangerous thing, getting married. So many people who think they love each other find out their mistake too late. You don't know me very well."

"You mean you don't know me very well."

"I'm not afraid of you, but for you. I'd hate to disappoint you, and I don't really amount to much. I can't do anything except gad around; and you'd tire of me."

"Not in this world—nor in the next."

"It's darling of you to say it, and you think you mean it—now. But—"

"I know it, Daphne, honey, now and forever. I don't want anybody but you. Life won't be life without you. You've promised to be my wife. I hold you to your promise."

"All right." It was exceedingly satisfying to surrender her soul into his keeping. She had reached harbor already after so brief and placid a voyage.

He ended a long, cozy silence with the surprising remark, "I suppose I ought to ask your parents' consent?"

The daughter of the twentieth century laughed: "Parents' consent! You do read a lot of ancient literature, don't you?"

"Still I imagine we'd better break it to 'em."

"You leave it to me to break it to 'em. They'll be glad enough to get me off their hands."

"I'll never believe that."

When they reached her home it was late and his hotel was so far that, since he would be spending his last evening with her, anyway, she asked him to stay to dinner.

She broke that news to her parents, and it caused them acute distress. Her father and her mother were deep in the battle that always broke out between them when the monthly bills arrived. Daphne was so used to this that she hardly noticed it.

After dinner the parents retired to the living room to read and sew and mumble over their mutual grievances, while Daphne and Wimburn sat and the piazza which the moon turned into a blue portico of mystic spell.

CHAPTER III

The next morning Wimburn woke from dreams of bliss to the realization that his hotel bill would require all of his funds except enough for the porter's tip and a few odd dollars.

He could not buy Daphne an engagement ring with a few odd dollars, and he was afraid to leave her without the brand of possession on her finger.

But how was he to come at the necessary sum? He could not decently ask the firm he was dealing with to lend him money. He might have asked it to cash a check on his bank, but his account was at the irreducible minimum.

After an hour or two of meditation he determined to beard a jeweler in his lair and try to coax him into the extension of credit.

He loitered in front of several windows, staring at the glittering pebbles on the velvet benches till he found a tiny gem that he thought might feebly represent his exquisite adoration. He went in and asked the price. An eager salesman peered at the very small tag and announced the very large price—$185. It was not much for a solitaire, but it was too much for that bachelor.

He clung to the counter for support and in a husky tone asked for the credit man. He was escorted to a barred window where a very sane old person gazed out at people insane enough to buy jewelry. Mr. Gassett had a look of hospitality toward cash and of shyness toward credit.

Wimburn hemmed and blushed and swallowed hard. With the plausibility of a pickpocket he mumbled as he fished a card across the glass sill:

"I am Mr. Clay Wimburn of New York city. I have been out here closing up an important deal for my firm with one of your big mills. I happened to see a little ring in your window—rather pretty, little thing. Took a fancy to it. Had half a mind to buy it. But rather short of cash and—"

Mr. Gassett waited with patience.

Clay went on: "I have no right to ask you to give me credit. But I'm very anxious to leave the ring here."

"Leave it here! I thought you want

"Of course! I want to leave it on the finger of a young lady."

"Oh," said Mr. Gassett, to whom ladies' fingers were an important market.

Finally he said: "I don't suppose you would care to tell me who your fiancée is. That might make a difference."

"Why shouldn't I tell you? I'm certainly not ashamed to. I have the honor to be engaged to Miss Daphne Kip."

Mr. Gassett smiled. "Not old Wesley Kip's girl?"

"I believe I did hear Miss Kip call her father Wesley."

"Well, I'd like to help Wes out. I suppose I might take a chance. Do you think you can pay for the ring in ninety days?"

"Easily!"

Wimburn would have promised to tear down the world and rebuild it in ninety days.

"I shall have to add a little to the price for the risk and the accommodation."

"Anything you like," said Clay magnificently.

"Call it two hundred dollars."

"Certainly!" One could hardly haggle over an engagement ring.

"I'll ask you to sign a little document."

"With pleasure."

He would have signed an agreement to surrender a pound of his flesh.

Clay hurried out to find Daphne and fasten on her the glittering gyve.

He might have taken further alarm from the immense and greedy rapture Daphne revealed at the sight of the petrified dewdrop set in the golden circlet. Women are all misers when it comes to diamonds.

Wimburn noted only the joy the bauble gave to Daphne, and the pretty submissiveness with which she poked out her slender finger and slid it into the fether. He felt that the kiss of affiance was worth years of hard labor.

It was hard and bitter to rend their cemented hearts in twain, but he had to go at last. She floated him to the station in the little car and waved him through the iron paling. She was unimaginably precious and pitiful as she stood there, and he wanted to blubber when the vestibule was slammed shut and the train slid out of the station like a merciless snake.

He vowed that he would work with the strength of ten and pile up a fortune in the bank for her. But first he must pile up enough to pay for that solitaire.

Clay wrote Daphne a fat letter every day. He usually sneaked it in among his business correspondence and took great pains that it should never miss the Lake Shore limited at five-thirty in the afternoon. A special-delivery stamp put the letter in Daphne's hands every next forenoon.

But after the letter had gone he usually remembered that he had omitted to include some message of frightfully important urgency. So he had to send her every night a night letter, and frequently of mornings he must fire off a day letter. These cost only sixty cents apiece, but often he had to send them in double or triple length.

For occasions where time was yet more unendurable there was the telephone—a pittance of three dollars and twenty-five cents for the first three minutes, and a dollar and five cents for each additional minute or fraction thereof would bring his lips to Daphne's ear.

From the little rubber mouth of the receiver her voice came to him as from a distant star, by interplanetary communication. The sense of remoteness was unbearable. She seemed to be dead and wailing across eternity.

Clay Wimburn was in complete distress. His health wavered and his office work suffered till it won rebukes and threats from his chiefs and comment even from Bayard Kip, who never suspected and was never told of Wimburn's infatuation for his sister.

With lover's logic Wimburn persuaded himself that the only one who could save him from destruction was Daphne. With her married and all, and ensconced in a little nest in New York, he could take up his office tasks with a whole heart. So he began to write, and to telegraph, and to groan across the living wire wilder and wilder cries for help.

Daphne wept back and repaid his longings in kind and suffered heart-rending ecstasies of yearning. And finally she promised frantically to marry him without further delay.

With a desire to economize in pain she broke the double news to her two parents at the same time, telling them both that she was engaged and that she was about to wed.

They were stunned. They had never experienced a suspicion of the acute state of Daphne's heart affairs. It is really astounding how blind parents are to their children's activities and how much can go on under their noses without catching their heavy eyes.

Daphne easily browbeat her father and mother into consenting to her early marriage. Her father groaned at the thought of the wedding expenses, but consoled himself with a Pisgah-sight of the Canaan when the last of his dear children should be living at another man's cost.

Mrs. Kip made one stipulation: "I won't let Daphne sneak away to New York and be married by a justice of the peace or a coroner or whoever does such things in New York. She must have a church wedding and a home reception."

Daphne accepted this unanimously, with one amendment.

"I must go to New York to get my trousseau."

"Of course," said Mrs. Kip.

"Of course not!" said Mr. Kip.

"Why not?" said Mrs. Kip.

"The expense is the why not! What's the use of spending a fortune on clothes? The money that goes out for these honeymoons might better be turned into the wedding fund. Lord knows Daphne will need dollars more than she needs duds if she marries that young fellow."

Daphne broke out in a revolt. "Oh, but I'll be glad to be free from this everlasting talk of money, money, money! I hate it. I hate to take it from you. If it weren't for the disgrace I'd bring to you and mamma I wouldn't accept a cent; I'd be married in my old bathrobe. Thank heaven, I'm marrying a man who doesn't hang onto every penny like grim death."

In her own heart she did not realize what a grievous wound she dealt the battered old heart of her father till he sighed:

"I was like him when I was his age. Maybe he'll be like me when he's mine. If I had been more of a miser then I guess I'd be less of one now."

Then Daphne caught the hunted, hounded look behind his spectacles and flung herself in his arms, weeping: "Forgive me, daddy. I'm a little beast to talk to you so. I don't mean it. I'm just excited. I'll get only the simplest things, and some day when Clay and I are rich I'll pay you back a thousandfold."

He patted her and kissed her gawily, and, manlike, having gained his point, threw it away:

"You get whatever is best and nicest. You're the priciest girl in Ohio and you're going to have the finest wedding ever was seen in Cleveland. And I'll find the money all right, never you fear."

He had just remembered a bit of real estate that had not yet been decorated with a second mortgage. He had bought it secretly with the proceeds of a windfall. That was his double life. Instead of spending money surreptitiously on dissipation, when he had a bit of luck he sneaked out and invested it in something he could borrow money on in a crisis. The crisis never failed him.

So Daphne wrote to her brother that she was coming to New York to buy a trousseau for her wedding to the dearest boy on earth, whose name she would not tell him till she saw him.

Her letter crossed a letter from Bayard, who began it with his regular apology for his unavoidable delay in writing home.

Dearest Mother, Dad and Sis—Received several sweet letters from you, mother, and meant to answer, but been very busy. The hard times forced us to cut down staff, and threw extra work on men retained. But business has been so bad so long it can't get any worse. Bound to get better.

So I'm going to—don't drop dead yet—I'm going to get married. Found the angel of the world. Known it for a long time; been engaged a year, waiting to get rich enough to place her where she belongs. Not there yet, but can't stand bachelorhood any longer.

Wedding date not settled yet, but probably some time in June. That would make a good song, "Some Time in June." Will let you know exact date.

Silence followed the document. And there are few documents that mean so much to every family as that bearing the news that one of the children has gone into the world and found a mate and given up the ancient loyalty for the new.

Are You a Tree or Bush?

In an article in American Magazine a writer says: "The all-around man is, I suppose, the highest type of human product, because he is able to meet all kinds of people on terms of mutual interest and understanding. But—well, I guess it is the difference between a tree and a bush. A bush starts to put out branches from the ground up. It is a pleasant object, a nice bush is. But it never gets very far. A tree has one central trunk, which stands like a pillar of steel against all the buffets of storm and stress. And it goes on, up and up, climbing, ever climbing higher. The branches are fine enough. But they are not the tree! The thing that stands and gets somewhere, and holds the whole growth together, is the central trunk. That, to my mind, is Purpose."

Are You Open-Minded?

The average American is open-minded.

American business is conducted by true Americans of vision, open-minded men who believe in their country and strive to meet their country's needs. The men in the packing industry are no exception to the rule.

The business of Swift & Company has grown as the nation has progressed. Its affairs have been conducted honorably, efficiently, and economically, reducing the margin between the cost of live stock and the selling price of dressed meat, until today the profit is only a fraction of a cent a pound—too small to have any noticeable effect on prices.

The packing industry is a big, vital industry—one of the most important in the country. Do you understand it?

Swift & Company presents facts in the advertisements that appear in this paper. They are addressed to every open-minded person in the country.

The booklet of preceding chapters in this story of the packing industry, will be mailed on request to

Did you ever think what kind of manner you are developing? Or how it pleases folks who meet you? Well, you'd better get busy and think about it. You have no idea what a difference it makes. We have in mind a man who has gained some measure of fame; he has standing in the world and in his business. But he owns a manner that we wouldn't keep in the woodshed. He is exceedingly cultured and apparently possessed of beautiful manners, but his manners hide a nasty superciliousness. He is in reality an extremely disagreeable and conceited person—and the fact has lost for the business he represents many thousands of dollars a year. Consequently it has lost many thousands for him. If his manner were actually courteous instead of counterfeit courtesies, he would be nearly a great man.—From American Boy.

What Did He Mean?

She Would Wait.

A little girl went over to her playmate's house to play. Since her playmate's grandmother was sick the children were asked to be quite still. But they soon forgot about that and became noisy, and of course the little visitor got ready to go home after they had been scolded for their noise. But, nevertheless, she took time to say this: "Well, Jane, when your grandmother dies let me know and I'll come over and play with you."

Sun Rises After We See It.

Has it ever occurred to you that we never see our sun either rise or set? asks Popular Science Monthly. When it seems to rise or when it seems to set it is below the horizon. These statements are absolutely true. Our eyes do not deceive us, but the atmosphere does. It possesses a quality of refracting or changing the direction of the sun's rays. These rays enter our earth's atmosphere, at sunrise or sunset obliquely, and then instead of proceeding in a straight line they are so bent out in a straight line that the sun's rays reach us before it begins to appear above the eastern horizon, and after it has wholly disappeared below the western horizon. In other words, our sun really rises after we have seen it rise and really sets before we have seen it set.

Searchlights on the Sea.

Ranges of electrical searchlights vary from 1,000 to 2,000 yards in foggy weather to 10,000 yards or more when the air is very clear. The average range is approximately 6,000 yards, but there are cases on record where ships have been spotted at a distance of nine miles. These figures are based on a 60-inch mirror and a 20,000-watt arc and are accurate.—Popular Science Monthly.

THE FOOD WORK TO CONTINUE SAYS HEINZ

Food Administration Work to Be Carried On by Mr.
Hoover's Orders.

SOME PAID WORKERS TO GO

The Organization to Stick to the Job.
Penalties to Be Inflicted Against Profiteers Though Certain Food Restrictions Will Be Removed.

The Food Administration is to continue its activities. This fact was made plain by Howard Heinz, Federal Food Administrator for Pennsylvania, speaking with reference to Washington's order affecting certain paid employees whose services are to be discontinued after January 1st.

"The impression exists in some quarters that the activities of the Food Administration have ceased, or are shortly to cease," said Mr. Heinz. "This is not the case. The Act imposes upon the Administration certain obligations which continue until presidential proclamation releases us from the Food Control Act, and particularly the obligation to curb profiteering and speculation in licensed food products. This function must continue to be performed."

No Intention of Relaxing.

"There is no intention of relaxing in this direction. It has been possible, now that peace is assured, to cancel many requirements for reports and many of the details of the regulations, but the profit margins and rules have been for the most part retained and will be enforced by revocation of licenses and other appropriate penalties. It is expected that it will be possible, from time to time, to remove certain commodities from the license list, but this will be limited to commodities which do not seem likely to be subject to possibility of speculation and profiteering."

"Mr. Hoover has cabled that the world's food situation is still critical and can only be solved, up to the next harvest, through the continued support of the American people and the burden will become more specific as soon as the problems of organization and transportation can be solved."

"Mr. Hoover, therefore," continued Mr. Heinz, "instructs us to continue our activities in response to the demand of the world's need, and for this reason the Food Administration in Pennsylvania will be continued until the actual signing of peace, unless abandoned by order of the President before that time."

The Door of Tears.

The main entrance to Bellevue hospital at New York is called the "Door of Tears." Millions and millions of tears are said to have been shed here. It is through these doors that friends and relatives of patients call to ask for them. It is here that visitors to the hospital are given directions for reaching certain parts of the maze of buildings that form the hospital. It is here that the good tidings or bad of the condition of the patients within are obtained. It is here that one smiles or drops a tear. Thousands of persons who have knocked at the door with high hopes have gone away weeping.

His Disappointment.

"Old Riley Rezzidew is a good deal cut up over the fire last night," related Burt Blurt of Petunia. "You see, he has been declaring for years that the planing mill was a regular fire trap. Every time the fire bell rang he would hop out of bed, howling that the planing mill was a goner this time, just as he had always told 'em it would be. And when it proved to be something else he'd console himself with the thought that he would hit it right on the next occasion. Then last night, while he slept so soundly that he didn't hear the bell at all, the planing mill actually did burn, at the only time that he hadn't told 'em so."—Kansas City Star.

Passing Through Suez.

The Suez canal is worked and controlled by an elaborate array of signals. At Port Said, on the Mediterranean entrance, at Suez, on the Red sea, at Ismailia, about halfway between, are the chief offices and controls of the canal. At all these places you see a simple yet clever contrivance at work, which plays an important part in controlling the traffic of the canal. In a quiet room upstairs on a long, low table running the whole length of one wall is a narrow metal trough. On a shelf above are a number of model ships. The trough, of course, represents the canal, and it has marked on it all the stations and sidings. The big lakes in the canal are also shown.

Olive Culture.

It is estimated that the number of olive trees in Greece is about 11,500,000. The olives are used for a variety of purposes. Those picked from the trees while green and unripe are made into vinegar, those picked when black and ripe are preserved for the table, and those not intended for home consumption are pressed for their oil.

FARM STOCK

INCREASE SHORT-FED CATTLE

To Save Feed, Department of Agriculture Advises Against Too High Finishing of Animals.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

In view of the unfortunate experience last winter of some feeders of heavy cattle, the continued high price of grain and the uncertainty of a continuation of good prices which well-finished heavy carcasses now command, the United States department of agriculture believes that feeders should concentrate their efforts on the production of economically short-fed cattle. Of course, this statement does not refer to baby-beef production, which is a specialty within itself.

There is no question that for the last several years cattle feeders have been making beef too fat; that is, they have put more finish upon the animals than economy would justify. This idea was evidently in the minds of the advisory committee of agricultural and live stock producers appointed by the department of agriculture and the food administration when that committee recently made the following recommendation:

"We feel that cattle marketed at the present time in class 4 (long-fed or export and highly finished cattle), and known as 'exports,' owing to the high costs of labor and feed, are not an economical product, and their production should not be encouraged."

Not only has the advisory committee thus warned against the heavy feeding of cattle, but it is also understood that the government officials directing the buying policies of the government will not consider themselves responsible for the prices of very fat cattle.

Recent experiences by various state experiment stations and the United States department of agriculture have borne out the fact that good beef can be produced by using a relatively small amount of grain, or with nitrogenous concentrates in connection with silage and some other cheap roughage in the form of hay.

The principle that should be avoided in future feeding operations, according to the advice of the department of agriculture, is to reduce to a minimum the amount of high-priced feed and to make judicious use of cheap roughages. In other words, instead of feeding from 50 to 60 bushels of dry corn per steer in the long feeding period, as was the custom in the past, the quantity should be, and may be profitably, reduced to 15 to 20 bushels in a shorter feeding period, or the dry corn grain can be eliminated altogether, as the liberal use of good quality silage will furnish an excellent ration. The use of cottonseed meal, linseed meal or other protein-rich feed, even though high in price, is to be highly recommended, because the higher other feeds are, the more profitable becomes the use of a protein supplement. Expensive hay may be completely eliminated in the ration by the use of a cheaper dry roughage such as corn stover, coarse hay or straw.

The department believes that by avoiding too heavy feeding and too high finish, and by following the suggestions given above, feeders should be able to feed cattle at a profit in spite of the high prices of feed and labor. The recent statement of the United States food administrator, and the available reports from foreign countries, indicate that there may be a great increase in the demand for beef, which is encouraging to the cattle feeders of this country, and especially those who suffered losses during the past feeding season.

Clean Wallow Hole Important.

A clean wallow hole is very important. Hogs may use the muddy wallow if no other is available, but if clean water is provided in a concrete wallow they will prefer it to the mud-hole.

Protection From Flies.

Horses, mules and cows should be protected from flies as much as possible. Some of the prepared sprays on the market greatly help in doing this.

POULTRY

GET RETURNS FROM POULTRY

On Many Farms Products From Fowls Can Be Counted on as Practically Clear Profit.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The farmer who raises the ordinary grains and keeps some live stock has perhaps the greatest opportunity that has ever come to him for making profit from poultry. The possibilities for profit are perhaps not so large as they used to be for the special poultry farmer, and that fact may have led some general farmers to believe that the situation applies in some way to them; but there exists just here an unusual paradox. The very conditions that may make poultry and egg production a losing enterprise on the specialized poultry farm tend to make it an increasingly gainful one for the general farmer. Where nearly all of his feed has to be bought at high prices, the margin between cost of production and proceeds from sale becomes extremely narrow, but where practically all of the poultry feed is made up of waste materials that would otherwise not be utilized in any manner, the percentage of profit becomes very much larger when prices are high than if ever could have been when prices were low. Poultry on the farm obtain a very great part of their feed by foraging by themselves, the waste from stable yards and feeding lots, by consuming the scraps from the kitchen door, by preying upon insect pests in pasture and field, and in only a relatively small degree from grain or other commodities that would be marketable. A farmer whose poultry is fed in this way may count all of the money received for eggs and surplus poultry as practically clear profit. When, therefore, eggs and poultry are selling at higher prices than have usually been obtainable, the farmer's margin of profit without expenditure is very greatly increased.

It is, therefore, to the farmers of the country that the nation must look for the greater part of the immediate increase of poultry products which will make it possible to supply our own army and navy with red meats and at the same time furnish the allies with the animal foods they need.

DISINFECTION OF HENHOUSE

Structure Should Be Thoroughly Cleaned Out and Sprayed at Least Once Every Year.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Once a year the poultry house should be thoroughly cleaned out and sprayed with one of the coal tar disinfectants or given a good coat of whitewash containing 5 per cent of crude carbolic acid or creosol. Unless the exterior is painted, a coat of whitewash will help preserve the lumber and give a neater appearance to the building. Spring is one of the best seasons to clean up and whitewash the poultry house. A well-made whitewash is the cheapest of all paints, and if properly made serves equally well either for exterior or interior surfaces.

A good whitewash can be made by slaking about 10 pounds of quicklime in a pail with 2 gallons of water, covering the pail with cloth or burlap and allowing it to stake for one hour. Water is then added to bring the whitewash to a consistency which may be applied readily. A waterproof whitewash for exterior surfaces may be made as follows: (1) Slake 1 bushel of quicklime in 12 gallons of hot water, (2) dissolve 2 pounds of common salt and 1 pound of sulphate of zinc in 2 gallons of boiling water; pour (2) into (1), and add 2 gallons of skim milk and mix thoroughly. Whitewash is spread lightly over the surface with a broad brush.

Guineas Gaining Favor.

Guinea fowls are growing in favor as a substitute for game birds, with the result that guinea raising is becoming more profitable.

Purebred Fowls Best.

If you are raising scrub chickens, you certainly are not making near the amount that you could if you had purebred fowls.

A LARGE SCHOOL

A great many reasons have been given to account for the rapid growth of this school.

Here is the real reason: "We consider nothing well done that industry and perseverance will improve."

This school is conducted for those who want a course that is better than the average.

It will cost you no more to attend a good school like this than to attend many inferior schools, and it will pay you a good bit better in the end.

ROUND KNOB

The farmers in our vicinity have been very busy the past week eating turkey and drinking hard cider and eating pumpkin pies, the kind that mother used to bake.

The shooting match was held on Christmas day in C. C. Foster grove. It was very largely attended. Some very close shooting was done. It was a day of amusement for the boys. H. H. Clark, of Everett, was the lucky man to take home the White Holland gobbler, which tipped the scales at 35 pounds. All went home requesting the former committee to hold another match on next Christmas day.

Albert S. Figard has made some improvements by erecting a new smoke house.

Harvey Clark has put in a new heating plant in his house.

Vera Barton and Josephine Barton are home on a vacation, spending their Christmas with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wilbert E. Barton.

Maggie Foster is home for a while spending her Christmas with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Foster.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Figard and daughter, Ruth, spent Saturday evening at Chester Dixon's. There was some very nice music rendered with Raymond Figard's new victrola.

Those who visited at the home of Wade H. Figard on Sunday was Calvin Foster, Harry Thomas and wife and son, Chester, Mathew Buckley and Robert Axon.

Mr. C. C. Foster and wife and daughters Annie and Maggie, ate their Christmas dinner with their daughter, Mrs. Wilbert E. Barton.

Ben Gordon, who has been suffering with the flu, is some better at this writing.

Mike Gowarty and wife and four children visited at the home of Albert S. Figard, on Sunday.

The schools which have been closed for about twelve weeks, have opened up again. We hope the flu has gone; as it was a very bad disease which caused considerable deaths in our neighborhood.

Signed DAISY.

Goods that Don't Stand Comparison

In anticipation of a long trip across the continent, this wise couple consulted the local dealer in luggage—trunks and umbrellas and as the time approaches for their departure they are satisfied with their new possessions. Friends come to bid farewell and their conversation touches upon the merits of home-buying and mail order houses. The visiting friends admire the home-purchased products and compare them with a guilty feeling of their own folly when they tried the catalogue method and suffered disappointment.

Later, after many weeks, the touring couple return with their home-purchased trunk and bags in almost the same excellent condition as when they left.

OPIUM AGAIN MENACING CHINA

Reports from the Far Eastern republic state that drug taking is reaching dangerous proportions in China, with the opium danger, once overcome by governmental action, again reaching large proportions. Blame is placed upon the authorities.

Poppy cultivation is increasing. It is found largely in Yunnan, Shensi and Manchuria. In Shensi it is on record that the local official has proclaimed that farmers who cultivate the poppy will be fined $6 per mow. This is the amount of the official squeeze. He does not destroy the crop and ruin the farmers. He is a humanitarian who administers the law—at a profit.

Further, it is known also that vast quantities of morphine are imported from Dairen. This preparation also comes nowadays from Vladivostok. A British doctor is authority for the statement that a beautiful hypodermic outfit complete in a case can be purchased for 70 cents, a price within reach of the smallest purse, as shopkeepers say. That the doping practice is not yet confined to the wealthier classes is evidenced by the fact that there are establishments at which by payment of a few coppers coolies can obtain morphine injections.

Fortunately, spurred on by disinterested foreigners, the better minded class of Chinese are being roused to a renewal of the anti-opium agitation.

Etiquette of the Flag.
"The etiquette of the flag," says V. B. "is still unknown to many persons. One Detroit society recently washed its flag, and the result was a cross between a crushed strawberry and the blue of a bedraggled Monday morning. ## Quebec, "Cradle of New France."

What a wealth of romance and legend surrounds the ancient city of Quebec. To wander among its narrow streets, to visit its historic houses, to make a pilgrimage to its venerable shrines and landmarks transports one for the moment back to the days of the grand seigneurs of New France. Here were laid the scenes of Sir Gilbert Parker's "The Seats of the Mighty," and of Kirby's "Le Chien d'Or." Here Wolfe and Montcalm fought their memorable battle on the Plains of Abraham.

IT'S NOT YOUR HEART
IT'S YOUR KIDNEYS

Kidney disease is no respecter of persons. A majority of the ills afflicting people today can be traced back to kidney trouble. The kidneys are the most important organs of the body. They are the filters, the purifiers, of your blood. Kidney disease is usually indicated by weariness, sleeplessness, nervousness, despondency, backache, stomach trouble, pain in loins and lower abdomen, gravel, rheumatism, sciatica and lumbago. All these derangements are nature's signals to warn you that the kidneys need help. You should use GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules immediately. The soothing, healing, stimulating and destroying the germs which have caused it. Do not wait until tomorrow. Go to your druggist today and insist on GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules. In twenty-four hours you should feel health and vigor returning and will bless the day you first heard of GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil. After you feel that you have cured yourself, continue to take one or two capsules each day, so as to keep in first-class condition and ward off the danger of other attacks. Ask for the original imported GOLD MEDAL brand. Three sizes. Money refunded if they do not help you.

HEALTHY ANIMALS

MAY SPREAD DISEASE

The medical profession has known for a long time that one of the menaces to which health is exposed is the infectious material often carried and unconsciously expelled by seemingly healthy persons and animals, but the true importance of this fact has begun to receive the wide recognition it merits only in recent years.

Today we know that many persons after recovery from typhoid fever continue to discharge typhoid germs from their bodies and that such persons cause numerous cases of typhoid fever unless they are properly controlled, and we know that exposure to diphtheria, even when it does not lead to the development of disease, means that the exposed individual often becomes a carrier of diphtheria germs, which are located in his throat, a region from which they are expelled in a way dangerous to the health of susceptible persons. And we also know that this same problem of seemingly healthy carriers and disseminators of disease germs must be given careful consideration because of its bearing on the health of our domestic animals. The possibility that animals may become persistent carriers of disease germs is not limited to any one or any kind of disease.

Rotten Row.

Possibly the well-known fashionable promenade in Hyde Park, London, derived its curious name, Rotten Row from the soft material with which the road was covered. It has been suggested that it is a characteristic British corruption of Rotten Row, the Norman term for "roundabout way," that is, the way corpses were carried to avoid more public streets. There were such paths in those old days of plague and infection, and no doubt they were necessary. A commonly received explanation of the name is that of "Canden"—"Rotterdam" way, that is, "rotten" way, because soldiers were punished there. There is still in use the word "rot" of old soldiers.

BARBED WIRE DISEASE

IN WAR PRISONERS

A peculiar psychosis of war prisoners which is international in type as shown by its identity in all races represented in the prison camps, is described in the Medical Record. In these war prisoners the barbed wire fences act as a red flag to a bull. Prisoners themselves have coined the name given the ailment.

There is a period of latency before the barbed wire disease develops. The first phase is one of stimulation. Men argue, become quarrelsome and envious. There is a rage for games. Gradually the picture changes to one of depression. One is no longer able to concentrate. Even music becomes undesirable. Sleep is disturbed by dreams and there is an abnormal sensitivity to sounds.

The barbed wire acts throughout as the badge and symbol of servitude. The part played by the wire appears to be shown by the fact that prisoners who work in small squads in the open under guard do not develop the disease. The author sees analogies of the "barbed wire disease" in Napoleon's life in St. Helena, in Stanley's prison experience, in Dostoyevsky's Siberian convicts, and especially in the polar explorers' mental state as recorded in many diaries.

MANAGEMENT OF CALVES ON PASTURE

With good pastures the roughage portion of the calves' ration may be eliminated. The grain portion of the ration in some cases may be slightly reduced, although as a rule the calves should be given all the grain they will eat while on pasture. It is seldom advisable to carry calves through the entire finishing period on grass. A better finish is obtained when they are dry fed during the latter portion of the period. It is never advisable to change calves from the dry lot to pastures when on full feed. It is safe, however, to change from pastures to the dry lot during this period.

When pastures are very good some trouble may be experienced in getting the calves to consume enough grain for the best results. In such cases it is generally better to keep them away from the grass during a portion of each day.

In sections where winter pastures can be grown the feeder should make a strong effort to provide such pasture during the cold season, as the green feeds greatly reduce the cost of both growing the calves and fattening them.

SCHELLSBURG.

A Happy New Year to all readers of the Gazette.

Thos. Snively, who has been honorably discharged from Uncle Sam's service, is visiting his parents.

Those of U. S. boys who were home on short furloughs were Walter Colvin, Hubert Colvin, Dewey Biesel and Earl Kinzey.

Misses Ruth and Margaret Snively, of Cumberland, were home over the holidays.

Miss Maude Beaver has returned to her work at Glassboro, N. J.

Miss Mary Nangle, of Mann's Choice, spent a few days with her grandmother, Mrs. S. C. Wolfe.

Lieutenant S. Arthur Wills, of Riddlesburg, who has been honorably discharged from the U. S. service, spent a few days at W. H. Beaver's.

Miss Lou Shaffer, of Frostburg, was a recent guest of her sister, Mrs. W. L. Van Ormer.

Prof. G. L. Wolfe and family, Mrs. S. C. Wolfe and Mrs. Hubert Colvin and son spent Xmas day with Mr. and Mrs. James Nangle at Mann's Choice. Miss Kate Williams is visiting her sister at Somerset.

Historic Signals.

Our books on naval history which give, in terms of flags, Nelson's signal at Trafalgar, will have to be brought up to date to include, in Morse dots and dashes, the immortal "St. George for England" of Zeebrugge. Our Japanese allies will be the first to note the fine watchword, for Togo, an intense admirer of Nelson, employed a variant of the Trafalgar signal in the great sea battle with Russia. Said he in his report: "I ran up this signal for all the ships in sight—'The fate of the empire depends upon this event; every man is expected to do his utmost.'"

Siberia's Frozen Well.

Scientists have for years been perplexed over the wonderful frozen well at Yakutsk, Siberia. As long ago as 1822 it was announced that the ground was frozen to an abnormal depth at the place referred to. In the summer of 1825 a Russian merchant set a gang of men to the task of ascertaining the depth of the frozen stratum. They gave up the job after digging 30 feet in solidly frozen ground. The Russian Academy of Science took the matter in hand and between 1838 and 1844 dug to a depth of 382 feet, and then abandoned the shaft because the earth was still frozen as hard as a rock.

Another Sugar Saver.

"Several years ago we received a small sample package of sugar-beet seed," writes a subscriber in the Woman's Home Companion. "We have a little extra space in our garden, so we planted it. About harvest time I visited a sugar-beet factory and what I saw gave me the following idea, which proved so successful in saving sugar that we have always raised a few sugar beets. Wash and scrub every particle of dirt from the beets, cut in small pieces and fill dishpan or very large kettle. Cover with cold water and boil until beets are very soft. Strain into another pan and cook sirup down until the desired consistency is obtained, being careful to skim all impurities from the sirup as it boils. Add a few drops of mapleine to give color and flavor of maple sugar. Cool and bottle. This last fall we made several gallons of sirup at practically no cost."

INGLESBETH.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Clingerman, of North Rose, N. Y., are visiting relatives in this vicinity.

Miss Stella V. Smith is visiting John Diehl, of Piney Grove, Md.

Infant child of Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Shipley was buried at Fairview Saturday evening.

Mr. Lester Leasure and Misses Nora and Belva Clingerman visited Miss Effie Clingerman Sunday.

Mr. Ingle Smith's family, who have had influenza, are improving.

CHANEYSVILLE.

Mrs. F. K. Tewell, who has been ill for the past three weeks, was taken to the Western Maryland Hospital for treatment Saturday morning.

Mrs. Chas. Beck and her daughter, Flossie, visited her sister, Mrs. B. F. Swartzwelder Saturday and Sunday.

There was a very pleasant Christmas service held at the M. E. church at Chaneysville last Wednesday night.

Miss Belva Swartzwelder, who has been staying with Mrs. B. F. Kooz, is spending a few days with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Swartzwelder.

Mr. H. S. Lashley from Rainsburg, Ohio, has been visiting his mother and friends here.

Mr. Thomas Fettes received a letter from Cecil Miller who has been in France so long that he expected to arrive at home in a few days.

Mr. Stewart Lashley who has been working for the government in Washington D. C. made a pleasant call at the home of Mr. H. O. Swartzwelder, here.

Miss Bertha Fettes, from Pittsburg, visited Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Bennett, last Thursday and Friday.

FLINTSTONE, ROUTE ONE.

Mrs. Clay Browning, of New Castle, Pa., is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Littlefield, at this writing.

Harry Lashley, of Ohio, is visiting relatives and friends in this section. Hilda McElfish spent from Friday until Sunday with her father, Mr. Gmear McElfish.

Gilbert Clouse, of Everett, spent Monday and Tuesday with his grandmother, Mrs. Charlotte Z. Roberts of near Elkinsville.

Those who spent Sunday afternoon at J. H. Littlefield's were Mr. George Collins, Stambert Roland, Paul Lashley, Virginia Roland and John Mumby.

Mrs. Maudie Leasure, of Bedford, is visiting relatives here at this writing.

BEDFORD, ROUTE 5.

After a prolonged stay of the flu, we are glad to be able again to write a few lines from this section. The epidemic has about passed out of this community, and we earnestly hope it will never return.

Mrs. Carrie Holdenbaum was a visitor at her brother, Wayne Richards, on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Fetter and children, of Osterburg, were guests of the latter's sister, Mrs. George C. Claycomb and family, on Sunday.

The many friends of Blair F. Crisman, who met with a serious accident on October 24, will be pleased to know that he has recovered enough to be able to sit up part of the time.

John S. Claycomb, of Braddock, spent Christmas here with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George C. Claycomb.

Mrs. Howard Bloom and son, Clark, were at East Freedom on Sunday the guests of her brother, Samuel Kegarise.

Daniel Speicher visited at his home on New Buena Vista several days this week.

Miss Carrie E. Claycomb, who spent several weeks here with her parents, returned to Brownsville, Pa., on Saturday, where she is teaching.

NEW PARIS.

Dec. 31—A Happy New Year to all readers of the Gazette.

Forest McMillen, of Pittsburgh, was home during the holiday season.

The sick of our town and community are all convalescent but Mrs. C. M. Davis, who is not expected to recover, her disease being cancer of the stomach.

The Misses Nellie and Mayne Blackburn, the former of Uniontown, and the latter of Pittsburgh, were the guests of their mother, Mrs. Emma Blackburn, recently.

On account of the epidemic in our town and vicinity, there were no Christmas services held by the Sunday school of our village. The Reformed and Evangelical schools gave a treat to their members.

Machtley—Gephart. At the home of the bride on Christmas, the Rev. A. F. Richards had the pleasure of tying a matrimonial knot for Mr. Warren Machtley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Machtley, of near Ryot, and Miss Dena Gephart, only daughter of Mrs. Anna C. Gephart, of near New Paris.

Not Sure It Was Error.
On one occasion Bishop W. A. Candler was advocating a more liberal loosening of the purse strings, and told his audience that several years ago he sent an article to a printer in which he said, "We pray too loud, and work too little." The compositor, consciously or unconsciously, perpetrated a little joke, for when the article appeared it read, "We pray too loud, and work too little." "I let it go at that," said the bishop. "The fact is, I believe the printer was right, and I have never ventured to correct him."

Great for Emergencies

San Cura Ointment Should Be in Every Home
There never was known a more reliable ointment than San Cura. In most every case where it has been used it has created astonishment. It drew a needle out of the foot of the daughter of Mrs. James Hitchcock, of Centreville, Pa., after the doctor had used his lance and failed.
It has great healing and antiseptic value. It possesses so much healing virtue that it is guaranteed by Ed. D. Heckerman to relieve any kind of piles, eczema, tetter, salt rheuma, boils, carbuncles, ulcers, all kinds of chronic sores, chilblains and chapped hands, or money back.

It's a mighty handy remedy to have in the house in emergencies for bruises, burns, cuts or scalds, because it relieves the pain and is antiseptic and healing. It's a medicine chest in itself—a little family physician that is ever in demand. 30c, 60c and $1.20 a jar at Ed. D. Heckerman's.

BEST SKIN SOAP
Is San Cura Soap, because of its great antiseptic and healing virtues. Use it regularly, and it will make the skin soft and velvety; will remove pimples and blackheads. It's the real soap for babies' tender skin, which mothers of infants should remember, 25 cents a cake at Ed. D. Heckerman's.

PROTECTS YOUR CHICKENS
and sure enough it does. A rat will leave all other food to get RAT SNAP and its last he eats. RAT SNAP chemically cremates the carcass. Doesn't have to be mixed with other food. Won't blow away dry up soil or decay. Surest, quickest, cleanest, safest to kill rats, mice and roaches. Four sizes 25c, 50c, $1.00 and $3.00. Sold by Metzgar Hardware Co.

A Bad Habit.
"It will never be rid of" is a common expression when one has a habit. Unfortunately it becomes a habit with some people in an effort to cover a multitude of sins and in the greater number of cases it is used in reference to something that might much better be otherwise. Conspicuousness is a characteristic well to avoid but it would be much more to the point to be noticed because one's clothes are trim and have that just right look which is the result of careful care as to detail. Assuredly one does not wish to appear in clothes or mentality as something that will never be noticed.—New York Herald

How Vessels Sink.
Nearly every class or design of vessel is said to sink in a particular way. For instance, the old-type of single-bottom steamer, with few or no bulkheads, almost invariably founders on more or less of an even keel, which means that they sink level. The case of a modern vessel, which is built with numerous subdivisions, founders with her bow or stern high out of water; or with a heavy list to one side. The bulkheads prevent the water which enters the vessel from finding the level, consequently when one particular portion of the ship is full of water, while the remainder is practically water-tight, that part which is water-laden sinks first.

Works as Brain Food.
Language is sometimes called the instrument of thought. But a very wise man says that really it is the nutrient of thought, the atmosphere in which thought lives; a medium as necessary to the activity of our mental powers as air is to the lungs. Coleridge said that every new term expressing a fact not previously defined was a new organ of thought for the mind that has learned it. To think new thoughts, then, new words are necessary. Like food for the body, they become food for the mind, and by the smallest of all mental chemistry they become transmuted into ideas.

Gander Always Pays.
"The art of life," says Tjall, "is to show your hand. There is no diplomacy like candor. You may lose by it now and then, but it will be a loss well gained if you do. Nothing is so boring as having to keep up a deception."

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

(By REV. P. B. FITZWATER, D. D., Teacher of English Bible in the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.)
Copyright, 1918, Western Newspaper Union.)

LESSON FOR JANUARY 5
PHARAOH OPPRESSES ISRAEL.

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 17:2-3.
GOLDEN TEXT—He shall save the children of the needy, and shall break in pieces the oppressor.—Psalms 72:4.
DEVOTIONAL READING—Psalms 2.
ADDITIONAL MATERIAL—Exodus 6:1-6; Hebrews 11:23-27.

The book from which the next eight lessons are taken is a continuation of the story of the chosen people. Its central theme is redemption—the deliverance of Israel from bondage and their separation unto God. The question of relationship from Egyptian bondage is a type of our own redemption from sin's bondage (I Corinthians 5:7). Pharaoh represents the devil, and Egypt the world.

I. The Increase of the Chosen Seed (1:7).
After Joseph's death Israel quickly grew into a nation. This increase was the fulfillment of Genesis 35:11, which promise was repeated to Jacob just before going into Egypt (Genesis 46:3). If it be the problem of how a little company of seventy persons could become an host of six hundred thousand men in so short a time, let us remember that God promised it, and all difficulties will vanish. There is a time coming when there shall be another amazing increase in Israel (Ezekiel 38:10, 11, 37, 38; 37:26).

II. A New Dynasty (1:8-10).
Joseph's elevation in Egypt was during the reign of the Hyksos kings. Being of Semitic origin they were not hostile to the Hebrews, but when there "arose up a new king which knew not Joseph" (v. 8) the amazing growth of the Israelites excited his envy and fear (vv. 9, 10). This fear was twofold: (1) In case of war they might join the enemy and fight against them. (2) Lest they should remove from the land, thus cutting off a vital source of revenue and exposing to danger the eastern border of the land.

III. Measures to Check the Growth of Israel (1:11-22).
These measures place on exhibition the folly of worldly wisdom (I Corinthians 3:19). Their fatal mistake was that they left God out of their calculations. God had promised that Israel should be great in numbers and mighty in power. He who plans against God shall miserably fail and shall be shown to be a fool.

1. Cruel Taskmasters (vv. 11-14).
They were placed under heavy burdens. Cruel taskmasters were placed over them who forced them to labor in building treasure cities and all manner of service in the field. This measure was ineffectual, for "the more they afflicted them, the more they multiplied and grew." This rapid growth resulted in more intense burdens being heaped upon them.

2. Murder of Male Infants by the Midwives (vv. 15-21).
This measure also miscarried, as the midwives feared God and chose to obey him. Because they refused to destroy God's people he gave them homes and children and the joys thereof.

3. Drowning of Male Children in the River (v. 22).
In order to make this measure effective all the people were charged with the responsibility of casting the Hebrew male children into the river. This mandate seems to have been given shortly before Moses was born. This plan likewise was foiled, and the very child who when a man upset his throne, was sheltered and nurtured in his own palace.

IV. The Birth and Education of Moses (2:1-8).

The measure which was designed to destroy the Hebrew menace, also brought to Pharaoh's palace and educated there the very man who afterward shattered the Egyptian power and set free the enslaved people. The faith of Moses' parents caused them to ignore the command of the king and hide him for three months (Hebrews 11:23). Faith in God is the antidote for fear (Psalms 27:1). His mother discerned in him a proper child, or a child fair to God (Acts 7:20), and believed him to be the deliverer of his people. She no doubt instilled this truth in his mind from his childhood. Perhaps led by the story of Noah's ark she made an ark of bulrushes and placed Moses in it and left it at the place where Pharaoh's daughter would be attracted when she came down to bathe. Miriam, his sister, was placed where she could watch the affair. She came with a suggestion at the opportune moment as to a nurse for the baby. Education at his mother's knee gave character, and education at the Egyptian court qualified him to be the historian and lawgiver of his people.

Necessary Ingredients.
"Love suffereth long and is kind; love envieth not; love vaunteth not itself."—Get these ingredients into your life. Then everything that you do is eternal. It is worth doing. It is worth giving time to.

Self-Denial.
Self-denial when regularly kept up and not only indulged now and then, out of laziness or partial affection, is one of the clearest tokens that God's holy spirit is with men, preparing them for eternal glory.—Kobbe.

Oh It's There!
Ouch, How It Pains!
Right Across the Small of the Back or Over the Kidneys!

LUMBAGO, RHEUMATISM, GOUT, OR FAULTY KIDNEY ELIMINATION.

All signals of distress. The kidneys have too much work to perform. Uric acid accumulates in the system in form of urate salts. Obtain at your nearest drug store that splendid discovery of Doctor Pierce's called "Anuric" (anti-uric). Anuric is more potent than lithia and dissolves uric acid as hot coffee does sugar.

Rome, N. Y.—"My kidneys have bothered me for some time. I used to have shooting pains through my shoulders. For weeks at a time I was not without pain. I also suffered with nerve spells and appeared to have heart trouble. My bladder seemed to be weak, especially at night. I was disturbed seven or eight times during a night. This caused me to lose much sleep and made me feel quite miserable. Recently Doctor Pierce's Anuric Tablets were recommended to me and I decided to try them. The relief obtained has been really marvelous. For days I haven't had a pain in my body anywhere, my heart and nerves seem to be stronger, and I no longer have any weakness of the bladder. What Anuric has done for me I feel certain it will do for others similarly afflicted."

"It is with pleasure that I make this statement and hope that this little news will put the relief that I have been assured of."—GEO. JAMES, 307 Russell Avenue.

Crying For Help

Lots of It in Bedford But Daily Growing Less

The kidneys often cry for help. Not another organ in the whole body more delicately constructed; Not one more important to health. The kidneys are the filters of the blood.

When they fail the blood becomes foul and poisonous. There can be no health where there is poisoned blood.

Backache is one of the frequent indications of kidney trouble. It is often the kidneys' cry for help. Heed it.

Read what Doan's Kidney Pills have done for overworked kidneys. Read what Doan's have done for Bedford people.

Mrs. W. Trout, 202 Spring St., says: "I suffered a great deal from severe pains in my back and sides. I was often very dizzy and spots appeared before my eyes. Finally my ankles and limbs became swollen. My condition was such as to cause me much worry. My son got a box of Doan's Kidney Pills at Heckerman's Drug Store, and I began using them. They did me more good than all the other medicines I ever took. The swelling went down, the pain stopped and I became stronger." 60c, at all dealers. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y.

Bartering Under Difficulties.

No European has ever been able to meet in their own dwelling places the Kukuhulus, a shy yet ferocious tribe of New Guinea. Other tribes of the country, while they have a great fear of the Kukuhulus, manage to do a bartering trade with them. They bring salt, earthenware, dried fish, etc., and deposit them in a certain indicated place. They then retire for a few hours, being notified to do so by a curious cry from the distance. The mountain dwellers then descend to view the goods offered for exchange. If they want them they put down other goods, such as skirts, feathers and other jungle produce next to those articles wanted by them. They then retire in turn and when the way seems clear the coast dwellers approach again. If the latter are satisfied with what is offered in exchange they take the goods put down by the mountain people and go away, if not satisfied they retire with empty hands.

Couldn't See That Kind of Party.
Jack, when told by his aunt, who is fond of bridge and entertainments frequently, that she was going to give him a party, looked up rather dubiously and said, "And will I have to sit on a chair and play with cards all the time?"

HOGWALLOW NEWS

DUNK BOTTS, Regular Correspondent.

Some Where, Nov. 1918

Mose Twigg is out looking for a job to make money to pay his dog tax. Mose has lost several dogs from disease this fall and his tax will be a little lighter this time.

With the exception of Raz Borlow and Ellick Helwanger, Christmas in Hogwallow passed off quietly.

The editor of the Saxton Tidings says he bets a lot of unfurnished war stories and moving picture plays got caught and were spoiled in the signing of the armistice.

G. Skinner says what has happened in Germany has happened in Hogwallow many times a fellow getting badly in debt and skipping out.

The Hogwallow Improvement Society has been working on a new set of New Year resolutions for Sale Barty to sign. The first one of the set binds him up mighty tight to tell the truth. The second one that he will get a job and go to work. It has already been decided that he will sign this paper whether he wants to or not.

Rat Smith's bartender says the country is getting so down on liquor that it causes the men to slip around through back doors and makes him feel as though he was not in a legitimate business.

The Hog Ford stillhouse proprietor says if the whiskey business plays out entirely he can on very short notice convert his place into first-class hog pen.

The Tin Peddler stopped at Bat Wat's moonshine stillhouse day before yesterday; got full and remained over night and during the night there was a steady downpour of rain and he had a mighty fine load of tinware to rust and ruin on his hands.

The new dress Miss Fruzy Allsop ordered from a well known Chicago concern for Christmas, pulled out under the shoulders the first time she wore it. This one time wearing has made it look like it had been worn a whole season and for this reason she fears they will not take it back.

The Horse Doctor has had his reputation as a professional man lowered considerably this week. He was called to administer to the suffering of Toke Mosey's billy goat and the goat died.

The old miser ate an extra hickory nut for Christmas. He also gave little Fidelity Flinders one which had a worm hole in it.

Ellick Martin says the only trouble he ever found in being a soldier when he was in the Civil War back in the sixties was that he was not allowed to shoot at the times he heard fed with the milk of the goat, during his career as a soldier he felt like shooting a superior officer; but there were rules against this.

Tope up. YOUR STOMACH, LIVER AND BOWELS

By taking a harmless, Vegetable Liver Chocolate each night before retiring you will not only cause the bowels to move regularly every day, but will also derive the tonic effect that these little Liver Chocolates are guaranteed to produce. They can be given to children with perfect safety, as they are purely vegetable. They do not gripe or nauseate, as does castor oil, salts, and other irritating cathartics. Due to the increased demand for KELLOUGH'S VEGETABLE LIVER CHOCOLATES, your druggists' stock may have been depleted, but fresh supplies have been rushed to him.

Automatically Closes Window.

A device which should be welcomed by many housekeepers is an automatic window closer. It is manipulated by a strip of blotting paper which holds in place a rod or lever connected with the sash. A drop of rain softens the paper, releases the lever and closes the window.

Too Much Abused Goat.

In song and joke, through all the ages the goat has had most of the left-handed compliments. All that the goat has done to redeem his character counts for nothing. The most fashionable men and women wear on their feet and hands the skin of the kid. The finest of shawls some of the most popular winter garments, are the product of these flocks. Dainty children not allowed to shoot at the times he heard fed with the milk of the goat, during his career as a soldier he felt like shooting a superior officer; but there were rules against this.

Firms Funds Well Guarded.

Six Chinamen were at one time partners in business in San Francisco, says Walter Newton of Seattle. A creditor of the firm, after vain efforts to collect what was due him, found out that the money was in the safe, but that the strongbox had six different locks. Each member of the firm had one key, and it was necessary to have a unanimous agreement among them before the money could be taken from the safe.

French Revolutionary Calendar.

The convention of the French revolution abolished the ordinary calendar and established a new one, beginning about the autumnal equinox with descriptive names for the months. The present time of year was under that arrangement the last month of the year. It extended from August 19 to September 18 and was called Fructidor (fruit).

Victoria Cross in First Place.

A man who has earned several decorations cannot please himself how he wears them. If he has been brave enough to carry off the V. C., that medal for conspicuous bravery must hang first upon his left breast—that is, in the center of his chest, and all other decorations, according to precedence, must fall away toward his left arm—London Answers

Blue Heron Worth Protection.

The great blue herons have no injurious feeding habits except for the few fish—usually not species of commercial value—which they consume; they are a distinct attraction in the localities which they frequent, and, thanks to the wise regulations recently put into effect by the United States biological survey under the provisions of the federal migratory bird law, are now rigidly protected throughout the United States.—Our Dumb Animals.

Mortality in Civil War.

The battle of our Civil war having the highest mortality rate was Gettysburg—"the high tide of the rebellion"—where 55 men were killed out of every 1,000 engaged. Mortality rates in some other important battles were: First Bull Run, 40.7; Second Bull Run, 45.4; Antietam, 39.7; Chickamauga, 47.8; Fredericksburg, 18.1; Wilderness, 31.2; Spottsylvania, 44.8.

Where Great Men Begin.

The small fry shine with singularities; great men start from their deep likeness to the race. Emerson remarked that great men have accepted the society of their contemporaries, the connection of events, and confined themselves to the genius of their age. A taste for smashing and alienation or martyrdom is not necessarily any better than a taste for heliolums or sentiment or jewelry.—Stark Young in The New Republic.

No Such Luck

A famous British general possessed of literary leanings in the course of an address in Edinburgh some years ago, had occasion to remark that he had kissed the "muses." The punner, thinking he could more accurately estimate the probabilities, made it appear "but the gallant soldier had kissed the 'muses' in his time of correction almost in spirit of regret, the general made it clear that he had had no such luck."

Literary Realism.

Robert Brooke, exposing the folly of those complaining that the Elizabethan drama is coarse, remarked "Their wail that its realism is mingled with indecency is more than twice repeated. True literary realism, they think, is a fearless reproduction of what real living men say when there is a clergyman in the room"—Boston Herald.

Pigeon voyager Unique

The "pigeon voyager" is a model of patriotism, for it knows but one home. So it must be "settled" in the locality where it is to be used. Consequently only the men to handle them can be trained in the United States; the birds, all of racing homer stock, sent from here are useful only for breeding. When ten weeks old, the "squeakers," as the young birds are called, are able to fly, and their training begins. They are taken from the lofts and left alone to get the first "mental photograph" of their surroundings. If frightened at this time they may become useless. Afterward come daily flights, beginning with one mile and gradually increased.

A lot of businesses are being run upside down these days and still makin' money.

Heat ALL Your House THROUGH ONE REGISTER

Yes, it's just as possible in your home as it has been in fifty thousand others. It isn't necessary to clutter up your house with pipes, overheat your cellar and incur big bills—not when you can get the

The Original Patented Pipeless Furnace

It can be set up in a day, without inconvenience to you, and will make your home so comfortable in the severest winter weather you will be well repaid.

Your house will be uniformly warm; your cellar will be just right for the storage of fruits and vegetables. Your fuel bill will be less than with stoves that heat only a part of your house.

HERE ARE THE REASONS

The Caloric is the Original Patented Pipeless Furnace—the result of the study of competent engineers to solve the heating problem in the most satisfactory way. That they have succeeded is proved by the fact that the number of Caloric sold on an absolute guarantee of satisfaction is three times greater than any other pipeless furnace.

The cause of this satisfaction lies in the patented and exclusive principles that distinguish the Caloric from all others. It is not a pipe furnace provided with an extra casing, but a complete revolution in furnace building designed exclusively for pipeless heating.

Come In And See Us

We will show you what these principles are, and you will then see what Caloric quality means, why it always succeeds and why imitations cannot accomplish the same results. Then you will be in no danger of buying an inferior article, with all its disappointment in later months. Get a copy of the book "Progress," which tells the fact about pipeless heating. If you can't come in, write for it.

"NEW YEARS" 1919

To the People of the District, Greeting:

That the whole people of the "District" may enjoy their full measure of Health, Contentment and Prosperity during the ensuing year is the most earnest wish of the "Altoona Booster Association."

An old adage says, "Everything comes to him who waits," but in the waiting one is more than apt to be consumed by sloth and rust, so we would rather pin our faith to "The Lord helps him who helps himself" and in order to help ourselves we must first help the people of the "District" to attain that Health, Contentment and Prosperity to which, as a moral and industrious people, they are just due.

There are a great many people who have never given the matter of buying in the district what they consume and use any thoughtful consideration whatsoever.

Socially and industrially, they are satisfied, as shown by the fact that they remain, but what about the commercial interests, without which there would be no enterprise, no development and no employment. The welfare of your district should be the matter closest to your heart as upon its prosperity and well-being depends your very life and existence. If it were not for your district merchants, who supply you with the necessities of life, how long could you remain at your present employment or vocation?

District buying is not a favor to the district merchant, but rather a matter of good business as every dollar you spend in your district remains there to work for the furtherance of your health, happiness and prosperity in many and various ways.

You can no more exist without your district merchant than he can exist without you, so be fair to both him and yourself, and buy everything you consume or use—in the district.

TABLE SCRAPS AND KITCHEN WASTE ARE BIG FEED FACTORS

A Flock of Seven Hens, Kept in Washington, D. C., Supplied a Large Family With Eggs, at a Total Cost, for Stock, Feed, and Maintenance, of Less Than Thirteen Dollars.

The value of a small flock of laying hens on a town or village lot or in a city back yard should not be underestimated. Even as few as six or eight hens should produce eggs enough, where used economically, for a family of four or five persons throughout the entire year, except during the moulting period of the fall and early winter. The product of such a flock, both in the form of eggs and fowls for the table, may be produced at a relatively low cost, because of the possibility of utilizing table scraps and kitchen waste which would otherwise be thrown away.

So many records of back-yard flocks have shown profit that there can be no question but that back-yard poultry keeping is profitable under the proper conditions. The record of a small flock kept in Washington during the past year throws some light on what can be accomplished under conditions that prevailed during that time. The flock consisted of seven hens which were bought December 18, 1917, for $5.80. This flock was carried through the ensuing year. Two were killed and eaten; the other five were carried the rest of the summer and continued to lay until September 18, the day on which the last egg was produced.

Kind of Fowls to Keep.

Householders usually desire not only eggs for the table and for cooking, but also an occasional chicken to eat. For this reason one of the general-purpose breeds, such as the Plymouth Rock, Wyandotte, Rhode Island Red, or Orpington, is preferable to the smaller egg breeds, because of their larger size, make better table fowls than the Leghorns, but the young chickens for the same reason make better friers and roasters, whereas chickens of the egg breeds are only suitable for the smaller broilers.

Contributory Causes to Success.

Two things should be kept in mind in connection with this flock; first, that the number of hens was small; and second, that the family in the household concerned was much larger than the average, with the result that a considerably greater amount of table scraps was available for feeding the hens than would be the case in the average family or with a larger flock.

The hens started laying in January, the egg production by months being as follows: January 21; February, 74; March, 132; April, 120; May, 140; June, 112; July, 107; August 108; September, 43. This gives a total egg production of 857, or 71 5/12 dozens.

The feed which was purchased and fed to these hens during this period, and in fact which was sufficient to carry the hens until December 1, 1918, cost $7.01.

There was no cost of equipment in caring for the hens. During the winter the flock was confined to a corner of the cellar, which was partitioned off by means of old screens and screen doors. A board was placed by a window which allowed the hens to go out dooors during the bright days. On the rest of the winter days they were confined to the cellar. During the spring and summer the hens were allowed to run in the small back yard, and roosted in an ordinary dry-goods box which was placed under the back porch. Small boxes were used for nests.

Actual Result in Figures.

The original cost of the hens was $5.80. Added to this is the cost of feed, $7.01, making a total cost for acquiring and maintaining the flock, of $12.81. The returns from eggs figured on the basis of 40c a dozen, which is very conservative, amounted to $28.50. The two hens eaten were the largest of the flock and averaged at least five pounds in weight. At 30c a pound the value of these hens amounted, therefore to $3. Thus, the total income from the flock was $31.50, while the total expense were $12.81, leaving a return over cost of fowls and cost of feeding of $18.69. This figure, however, does not take into account the value of the five hens on hand. These would average at least four pounds in weight, so that, at 30c a pound, each hen would be worth $1.20. This would add to the credit balance $6, and would therefore show a profit on the hens on September 18 of $24.69. It will be noted that the egg production for the nine months involved was very good, 130 eggs a hen, and it should be stated in this connection that the man of the house is a butcher, and was frequently able to bring home scraps of meat which were fed to the hens, and which undoubtedly contributed greatly to the favorable egg production.

It will be noted that this city flock was kept under adverse conditions in so far as shelter was concerned. Back-yard flocks should be properly housed and where possible, should be provided with a covered run for use when the weather is rough. The small house with run attached, shown in the illustration above, is suggested as filling the needs for a few hens kept under town or city conditions.

In most localities the poultry house should face the south, as this insures the greatest amount of sunlight during the winter. Proper ventilation and sunlight mean a dry house and healthy birds.

Mites and lice frequently sap the vitality of the fowl and prevent growth or lessen the egg production. A thorough cleaning of the house, regular applications of disinfectants to the roosts and nests, and a frequent dusting of the fowls will control these pests.

Cull out and prepare for market all fowls, old or young which appear weak, slow or dull; fowls with drooping tails, rough plumage or crow-shaped heads; all scabs except those which have laying points; all hens which moult early; and all males except those strong, vigorous and of a pure type desired for breeding.
